MY JEWEL AND DARLING DUBLIN...

Through the years, Dublin has seen its fair share of characters. There's been pop stars, poets, laureates and louts gracing our streets and putting smiles on peoples faces for centuries.

At Fade St. Social, we've decided to put together a small homage to a handful to the wild and wonderful characters who graced our streets through the early 1900's, and pair their eccentric personalities with bold and daring flavours, as wild as the souls who caused chaos and as bold the brave buachaillí who fought them.

Be it pints, jars, quick halves or fancy tipples, this menu, like Dublin, has something for everyone!

Slainte!

- DOLLY FAWCETT -

Dublin was notorious for late night drinking holes in the 30's & 40's, more commonly known as 'Kips' or 'Sheebens'. The most famous kip was The Continental Cafe. Located at 1a Bolton Street near the corner of Capel Street, The Continental became famous for its extravagant women and its late night drinking sessions. The cafe was open from 1930's to the mid 60's and was run by the queen of Bolton Street, the legendary, Madam 'Dolly' Fawcett.

Although The Continental was best known as a late night 'cafe', it was also a popular place for these extravagant ladies of the night to find a client or two. The women entertained while the men tipped their cups of coffee washed with bottles of Baby Powers. The cafe famously served up Dolly's deadly cocktail - 'Red Biddy', a mixture of red wine, methanol, poitin and watered down whiskey.

- THE ANIMAL GANG -

Dublin's Animal Gangs came mainly from the Liberties originating in James' Street, the later members of the gang hailed mainly from Ash Street & Engine Alley. The very first animal gang were known to be a bunch of newspaper traders; gentlemen who would protect the women and children of the area, but still have a ruggy-up with anyone who dared square up to them!

At the weekends they would spill onto the streets from the pubs and find trouble. The Liberties lads lived by the Mafia rule of Omertha – To keep schtum and not rat each other out to the local police. They took no prisoners. It wasn't all violence however, the lads doubled up as the local Robin Hood's – They did whatever stealing needed to be done and whatever fighting needed to be fought!

- JOHNNY FORTY COATS -

P.J. Marlow only ever actually wore three or four overcoats at any one time, but dubs didn't care too much for facts at the time. Forty Coats was a rough sleeper, hence the number of jackets. He could be found rambling the streets of Dublin daily, heading out to mass in Sandymount and traipsing back into town with his scarf on his face and his coats wrapped around him, no matter the weather.

His favourite thing to do was to go into a restaurant, throw down a lump of change and make himself comfortable by putting his feet up on the seats and spitting on the floor. Forty Coats became so famous around the city that a fictionalised version of him appeared on the RTE TV Show Wanderly Wagon as well as his very own spin-off series.

HARRY MUSHATT

- HARRY MUSHATT -

When illness struck in the old days, people hadn't the money to go to fancy doctors so they headed to their local chemist; In Dublin, there was none more famous than Mushatt's chemist at No.3 Francis Street. People travelled from far and wide to get their hands on Harry Mushatt's famous lotions and potions. Whether it be foot cream or face powder, cough syrup or peroxide, Mushatt had you covered.

Mushatt became most famous with the men in the area for his signature Black Draft, a bitter drink known to cure the deadliest hangovers. It's men like Mushatt who kept the area fit and well, and knowing the carry on with the gangs and bowsies, his expertise was definitely needed!
